history of recycle direct

Recycle Direct was formed as an independent limited company in January 1999 to respond to a definite need for prompt and reliable service expertise for Lindemann recycling equipment. The company was formed by 2 ex-Lindemann service engineers, with a joint experience of over 25 years working on and repairing Lindemann equipment.

From humble beginnings, and based in a small cabin on an industrial estate in Bridgend South Wales, we specialised in the service and repair of Lindemann balers, shears and shredders.

We realised that we could fulfil the wishes of our clients by offering clear, uncomplicated, inexpensive and independent service for their equipment, with a particular emphasis on response times to keep downtime to a minimum.

Success proved us correct, and in 2001 we bought our own factory at Village Farm Industrial Estate in Pyle, Bridgend.

In 2002 we extended our business to manufacture our own wear parts which meant we could react even more rapidly to our clients needs by cutting delivery times to a minimum, and offering a better pricing option than the original manufacturers.

The manufacturing of wear parts has since been extended to cover the complete range of spare parts for most types of baling, shearing or pressing equipment, including conveyors. In April 2004 we moved to larger premises based in the Brynmerlyn Industrial Estate in Bridgend, South Wales, to accommodate this expansion. We now offer a complete in house machining capability for every type of spare part, for all types and makes of recycling equipment.

Our site services are still at the forefront of our business, and still include the service, repair, installation, removal and transportation of recycling equipment worldwide, and we currently employ nine fully trained mobile service engineers that are situated strategically throughout the UK, for rapid response to breakdown situations.

2005 saw us being appointed official service agents for Imabe Iberica recycling equipment, and we are able to offer new Imabe recycling equipment throughout the UK, coupled with a comprehensive technical backup and service. To add to this, we also supply all types and makes of used and reconditioned recycling equipment that we refurbish and repair at our workshops in Bridgend. We would wish to be able to satisfy all your recycling equipment needs from our one stop shop.
